DEFENSE SCORED IN HARRIS CASE

Banker's Wife Not Girl Seen in Tennessee, Witness Says

NEW YORK—(United Press)—The defense in the Harris arraignment trial produced today a witness who claimed to have known Samuela Lee, the "Susie Lee," upon whose shoulders it seeks to place the scarlet mantle attributed to the beautiful defendant by counsel for her husband.

Beverly D. Harris, a former vice president of the National City Bank, has based his suit for annulment of his marriage to Eleanor Elaine Lee, upon alleged misconduct of the defendant in her youth in Memphis, Tenn. The defense claims it was an sprung sister, one Samuela, or Susie, resembling Miss Harris, that committed any infidelity attributed to Elaine by witness for the plaintiff.

Oscar L. Smith, head of a firm at Dayton, Tenn., told the hearing Samuela Lee in 1941 at Memphis, Miss. He said he saw Elrene Harris in February of last year and is able to say that she was not the same person. He said that in July, 1941, he met a lady who introduced herself as Samuela Lee and that he recognized her. Under cross-examination by Carnahan Ewing, for the plaintiff, Smith was asked why, when the Harris case came before the judge, he took part of the trial, for which he took part of the Spanish and Belin Lee, a sister, he argued for the plaintiff.

Smith said that he wanted to find out if Samuela was Mrs. Harris. The court, he claims, the witness committed her and never known of an Eleanor or Elaine Lee until a year ago.

FOUR SCHOOLS ARE TO CLOSE THIS WEEK

DAYTON—Four schools in Montgomery will close at the end of this week for an indefinite period unless some solution to their financial problems is found, County School Superintendent A. A. Maystiles said today.

The four schools now at the end of their pocket books are in Hindlewood township, Union, Englewood and Starr and the high school at Englewood. Clayton Consolidate school is remaining open in the belief it will have money for operating expenses under a method the feasibility of which is now being determined by the state supreme court.

Appeals have been made to teachers in certain cases to work without pay until the finances may be adjusted, when they would be reimbursed. Such an unsatisfactory arrangement, however, is not expected to be carried thru.

RACING NEWS IMMUNE FROM POLICE RAIDS

DAYTON—Racing news received in the place operated by James Guenchen is news and therefore is not gambling and as such is immune from the police raids, according to a permanent injunction in effect here today.

The injunction was granted at midnight Saturday by Judge R. C. Patterson.

The ruling specifically states that the information received by telephone is news matter. The inferences drawn from the ruling is that if there is gambling that is another matter.

GROWTH OF VANILLA BEANS TO BE RENEWED IN TAHITI

PAPETE, Tahiti—The recent high prices for vanilla beans have stimulated a renewal of vanilla culture in Tahiti and the adjacent islands.

For some years past the growing of vanilla on most of the islands has been impossible because of a blight, introduced from the island of Réunion, which destroyed the rhubarb plantations formerly existing.

An agricultural expert called in by the government recommended that it impossible to eradicate the blight except by destroying all vanilla plants then existing and ceasing from replanting for a period of eight years. While these recommendations were not carried out to the extent of scrapping out and burning every vanilla plant infected, a period of more than 20 years had elapsed without any serious attempt to eradicate the culture. Now experimental planting has demonstrated that the virulence of the blight has abated so far that profitable planting again possible.

SOCIALISM FOR ENGLAND SEEN IN NEAR FUTURE

OXFORD—Speaking recently at the Oxford Union on the motion "that this house welcomes the advent of a labor government," the Premier's son, Mr. Macdonald, said:

"At the present time there is no practical possibility with the position of parties in the house of introducing socialist legislation. Nevertheless, we cannot ignore the fact that there is a possibility in the near future of a Labor majority which will permit such work."

Would changes in society of a socialist nature then be unnatural or illegal? Not so. The interests of the people can only be safeguarded by making political institutions democratic. Socialism, so far as it affects industry, means exactly the same evolution going on in industrial institutions."

DIGGING GRAVES WITH TEETH

EVERY lovers' quarrel, every spat between husband and wife, begins in the stew pot or the oven, says a celebrated English surgeon. Most of us have noticed a tendency to become irritable when our digestion is out of order.

The London surgeon even believes that character is considerably regulated by what goes into the stomach. He's reasoning along the same lines as feeding raw meat to a prizefighter to make him ferocious or candy to a girl to make her amiable.

Sir William Osler once said: "For some reason the brain and the stomach have never been friends, and the cleverest men I know treat their stomach like dogs."

Charles E. Hecht, English food expert, says he studied great men of history and decided Osler was right.

Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, always ate a heavy dinner an hour before going to bed—and never was able to figure out why he had diarrhea and indigestion. Hecht thinks Spencer's gloom and concern were caused by his ignorance of the simplest rules of diet.

Napoleon another dyspeptic ate at regular hours. He bolted his meals. He gorged. He was forever munching candy. Here was a brilliant man, intelligent enough to conquer nation after nation. Yet he couldn't master his appetite.

Shakespeare's marvelous plays could never have been written by a dyspeptic. He ate carefully, sensibly and had excellent digestion.

A big insurance company claims that nearly half of the illnesses of policyholders originate in indigestion. You recall the old saying, that most people dig their graves with their teeth.

Good cooks cause more indigestion than bad cooks—for tasty viands often people to overeat. Most folks, when the stomach is upset, blame it on some particular thing they have eaten. As a rule, the indigestion is caused by eating too much—or too fast, as is the tendency in this madhouse age when everyone imagines he's in a hurry.

An old Lima doctor says it's a good rule always to go away from the table a bit hungry. The stomach can easily be the gateway to the cemetery.

WHEN YOU FALL

DRUNKS are investigated by scientists in Vienna. Dr. Schumacher finds that one accident in 40 over there is caused by intoxication. Drunkards are injured mainly in fights, by getting run down and by falls.

Intoxicated people are less hurt by falls than sober ones, Schumacher reports. This is traditional. It's not due to Providence, but to a drunk falling like a sack of wheat, while a sober man in falling makes himself "thrill" by stiffening his muscles and joints. It may save your life some day if you remember to relax and let the whole body go limp when falling.

AUTO PRODUCTION

AMERICAN factories in 1923 produced 3,635,757 passenger autos, compared with 2,339,768 the year before, final figures show. And it looks as if 1924 will smash another record. In January three and a half times as many passenger autos were manufactured as in January, 1922.

How long will it be until there'll be similar figures for airplane production?

CRAZED AUTO DRIVERS

ACCUSED of endangering life by reckless driving, a man in Marlboro, Mass., is sentenced never to drive an auto again. If the same sort of justice were applied to all, at least one driver in 10 would have his car taken away from him.

The time is not far off when no one will be allowed to drive a car unless he passes tests for sanity, eyesight and caution. Many madmen drive cars, including ones temporarily crazed by liquor.

ARTIFICIAL GASOLINE

ARTIFICIAL gasoline is perfected by the French chemist, A. Damens, he claims. The process mixes sulphuric acid, copper oxide and ethylene then heating and distilling.

The big oil companies are not worried, for Damens adds that the price of making his artificial gasoline is prohibitively high. That's usually the case with substitutes for basic commodities. Artificial rubber has been perfected, but can't be made as cheaply as the real thing. Damens hopes to get his production cost down to 15 cents a gallon. We hope he succeeds.

MRI. RAND MRS. SPRATT

Formerly the big packers were able to utilize every bit of the hog but the squeal, and nowadays there's a steady demand for even that by-product. But it is premature for us to congratulate ourselves on the elimination of waste, at least while we continue to use only about two-thirds of the nutritive value of the wheat for flour. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt solved the problem of complete utilization of the nutriment at their disposal, with respect to carious components of the diet. We might take a cue from the Spratts, with respect to at least one item of our mixed diet which is quite as important in a nutritive way as anything that comes on hoots. I am alluding to potatoes. The Irish do very well, I mean of course, the should be the last to disintegrate against coated sweets with fried chicken at Vicksburg, which they sometimes serve to distinguished guests in Ireland.

The nutrition of hogs is extremely well provided for in this country. Indeed, the authorities at Washington assure us that more hog meat than beef and mutton is now consumed by the American people. The most casual consideration of the nutritive material which we commonly reject in trying to find a portion soft enough for our poorly nourished teeth or "pink" enough for our pimpered digestion gives us at least a hint as to why the hog thrives so well. After all, they get a rather better balanced diet than most of us humans permit ourselves to have.

Everybody knows that a baked potato is a wholesome morsel—I myself consider it no more wholesome or digestible than a boiled or fried potato, but let's not quarrel about a minor point now—and nearly everybody who esteems baked potatoes takes pains to remove the skin and discard it as something unfit for human consumption.

Give me the baked potato skins and you may have all the white starch within.

The baking, in the first place, sterilizes the skin, thus insuring against any impossible ingestion of parasites or their microscopic eggs. In the next place, most of the fine flavor of the potato hides in the skin. The main reason for preferring baked potato to boiled in the sickroom dietary is that in boiling most of the mineral salts are dissolved out into the potato water and lost, but unless you eat the baked potato skin you might as well have your potato boiled after all. The vitamins in potato are chiefly immediately under the skin and are discarded by those who peel the "peel."

Of course the cellulose (woody fiber) of the potato skin is not digestible for man, but that very fact is another good reason for eating the skin of a baked potato, for that universal ailment, constipation, is largely due to insufficient roughage or indigestible material in our food.

There are few edible substances which are better chewing than baked potato skin and I still maintain that the fustication of such natural foods is the best tooth preservative.

Some persons crave raw potato and tend to indulge this not unnatural craving. They may and should indulge it in a reasonable way. But I urge the eating of the potato skin as the normal way to satisfy that instinctive craving for mineral matter or vitamines of whatever it is.

Little eyes that dance with glee,
Lay the troubled way for me.

Little hands, so soft and white,
Mark my heavy burdens light.

Little feet that patter near,
Carry oh, so much of cheer!

Little cheeks so soft to press,
Yet so plump with happiness.

Strange it seems, and yet so true,
I should care so much for you.

Why should I, so big and tall,
Give my heart to one so small?

Why should I sit all the while,
Lager just to see you come?

Why should all you do or say
Comfort me throughout the day?

How has all this come to be
That you mean so much to me?

Can you guess, or do you know,
Why it is I love you so?

It's because my heart is glad
I was picked to be your dad.

DAUGHERTY ASKS SPECIAL RIGHTS

Demand Probe be Conducted Like Court Trial

WANTS WITNESSES HEARD

Plan of Defense Made Known Thru Counsel

WASHINGTON—(United Press)—With Senator LaFollette, progressive leader, in the background directing the strategy, the senate committee named to investigate Attorney General Daugherty's administration of justice met today to plan its inquiry.

Regarding the investigation as a trial of himself, Daugherty, thru counsel, has demanded that it be conducted exactly like a court trial and that he be permitted to subpoena defense witnesses.

Cong. Small committees never permit persons being investigated to summon witnesses in their own behalf. In most cases, refuse even to permit cross-examination of committee members. Daugherty has demanded the right to do both.

PROBATE REPLY

The committee may reply to him that the Senate has not authorized the committee to try him, but merely to investigate his whole administration of the department.

In pursuing a course of investigation, first place will be given to a scrutiny of the activities of the bureau of investigation of which William J. Burns is head. The progressives have wanted to subject that agency to a shake-up ever since the war and now that they have the chance, they will not let up.

Next on the program so far as it has been decided on by the committee, will be an inquiry into the complaints of the federal trade commission that the department has not followed up its department.

STEUBENVILLE—Sale of United States treasury savings certificates in 13th Ohio congressional district has been halted by Captain L. Wallace, director of the national savings system, upon request of Belmont-co bankers.

The bankers protested to Congressman Murphy of this city. They claimed sale of the securities was resulting in deposits being withdrawn from banks. Captain Wallace wrote the congressmen the banking situation required further efforts to sell the certificates would be abandoned.

FORMER PROHIBITION OFFICER PLEADS GUILTY

YOUNGSTOWN—J. N. Carrothers, former state prohibition officer, today pleaded guilty in common pleas court to a charge of giving $100 to W. H. Wilson, another dry agent, for the purpose of having Wilson destroy evidence to save a friend of Carrothers from prosecution. Carrothers was indicted on other charges, including one of himself accepting bribes but the prosecutor decided to press only the charge involving Wilson. Every seat was taken in the court room long before court opened today. It had been believed that Carrothers would stand trial.

WILL PARENT AND CHILD AGREE?

Father and Daughter Both Serve on Same Jury

Foundation for what may develop into a family argument was laid in common pleas court Monday when a father and daughter were accepted on the same jury.

Miss Audra Fisher, 21, of 129 S. Scott-st., member of the regular panel came to court accompanied by her C. W. Fisher, her father.

An extra talesman was needed, and a bailiff impressed the parent for service, in a suit for $54 brought by Theo. Schied against L. A. and R. E. Railings.

Court attachés are waiting the outcome of the case, anxious to learn if the father and daughter will reach the same conclusion on the case. Suppose the father thinks one way and the daughter another?

Will he as a father influence her to change her viewpoint, or will she as a Modern Eve, do as she pleases? Decision in the case will be made by 11 jurors. William Nolan, member of the jury, became ill within a short time after the trial had commenced.

Attorneys agreed to continue with 11 jurors in the box. Judge W. H. Blachly, of Van Wert-co, is hearing the case.

The jury is composed of U. M. Shappell, Mrs. Dora Long, John L. Kelley, Marie Ramsey, George Cook, Pertha Oglesbee, Carl Thornberry, Gertrude Bowyer, Audra Fisher, Charles Shull and C. W. Fisher.

THREE ALLEN-CO FARMERS IN TON LITTER CONTEST

Three Allen-co farmers have agreed to try to produce this year a ton of pork from a litter of pigs in 180 days. They are Harrison Bassett, Bath-tp, Howard Bassett, of Glen Oak farm, Amanda-tp, and John Holloway, Spencer-tp. If these men succeed in reaching this production, they are qualified for membership in the Ohio Ton-Litter club.

Entries this year greatly exceed those of last year. Only 201 Ohioans in 27 counties entered last year in an attempt to qualify for state club. This year 212 farmers in 33 counties have entered and the list grows daily.

Payette co leads in the number entries with 18, Williams and Vinton have 16 each, while Allen is only three.

Belleville authorities have been looking for Grimes for over a year, he said. He was taken from the suburban car going to Springfield at 2:30 A. M. and 1:30 A. M.

The sheriff was arrested by police at mid-night.

Mr. Butler told of his stay in Europe, during which he had attended several of her travel and visit to the various countries. Mrs. Butler spoke especially of Florence, saying that Rome, later going to Ischia, Riviera, British, Switzerland, and then crossed the Adriatic Sea to Trieste. Mr. Butler's experience while visiting the Italian battlefields was extremely interesting. She used color slides to illustrate her talk.

SUSIE SMART'S ADVICE

Dear Miss Smart,
I am the mother of two young girls, one is ten and the other is six.

We are very much in trouble now, but we are trying our best to get along. We have a maid, but she is not good. By the time we get home from work, it is time to go to bed, and we think that she is not good. We have a dog, but he is not good. We have a cat, but he is not good. Do you believe in the "old wives' tales"? Please give me some advice on these subjects. I am not able to help my family, but I am trying to do my best. Please help us.

How can we help our children?

A YOUNG girl fifteen should weigh 106 pounds and a girl sixteen should weigh about 112 pounds. You should be in the first and second year of high school.

You girls are too young to go about with the boys and talk to them, you do. It is rather unusual that any mother would allow her daughter to go with boys when she is not yet in her teens. You disagree with the author of the saying you quoted. However, that is just a matter of personal opinion, and perhaps you don't agree with me.

Ten o'clock is late enough for you to be out. Three nights a week is enough to be out.

Personally, I don't think one's complexion or coloring has anything to do with their disposition and personality. Two dark-haired girls should be able to enjoy themselves together as much as dark and blonde-haired girls.

Very good.

Dear Miss Smart,
Will you tell me what to do with my hair? I am very tired of it.

Perhaps you wash your hair too often. Wash it about every two weeks and be sure to give your scalp a good massage before washing it. This will free the oil from the head and prevent the clogging of the pores.

The following tonic is good for an oily scalp. Blend 10 drops of alcohol, 4 drops of distilled water, 10 drops of glycerine, 10 drops of benzene; dissolve in 80 grains. Massage in the scalp every night.

BRAN made appetizing!

Now it is possible to get a really delicious bran food—

POST'S BRAN FLAKES

It is delightfully crisp and flavorful. It contains the most nourishing parts of wheat. And it supplies just enough bran—in just the right form—to promote healthful regularity.

Now you'll like Bran!

CROWDS FLOCK TO HUNTER'S DRUG STORE; PEPPEN CONTINUES TO AMAZE PEOPLE OF LIMA

Ritchie Ave. Woman Says: "Peppen Helped My Son"

The activity Saturday at Hunter's Drug Store on the Public Square where W. E. Jaxon is introducing the new medicine Peppen was almost spectacular.

Throughout the day crowds of people flocked to this well known store to get some of this famous remedy.

Mr. Jaxon and his assistant Mr. Murray were kept busy throughout the day talking to those who came in to inquire about the uses of Peppen.

A most interesting case which has just come to light is that of Master Robert Roush who lives at 808 Richie Avenue.

"My boy Robert, who is now five years old, has been in bad health for the past three months," said Mrs. Roush.

"His color was bad and his food did not agree with him. I was very careful about his diet, but he had a tendency to vomit almost everything he ate.

"After the way Peppen has helped my boy I am more than glad to recommend it to my friends in Lima."

"CAUTION: The genuine Peppen which Mrs. Roush has recommended is packed in a white box and gold carton. It may be obtained in Lima only at the Hunter Drug Store, 49 Public Square, and corner Main and Wayne Sts., and the Argonne Store. There is a Peppen store in every nearby town."

To break up a bad cold you must take a cupful hot at bedtime. Bad colds often turn into influenza or pneumonia and thousands die every year.

Sick people should be careful not to use harsh, drastic or harsh drugs.

"Just remember I have made this tea for sick people for over five years," said H. D. Von Schlick, sole manufacturer. "It is one of the purest herbs of high medicinal value and when taken regularly twice a week should make anyone feel years younger."

Ask your druggist for the genuine Bulgarian Tea with my label.

Colonel Holles, soldier and adventurer, returns to England, his native land, when with Holland is released. It is dangerous for Holles to secure a commission in the English army, since the name of Randal Holles, father of the colonel, is on the warrant for the execution of the late king.

The dreaded plague is spreading rapidly in London. A friend of the colonel, named Tucker, is arrested for plotting against the government. Because Holles has been seen in Tucker's company, a warrant is out for his arrest.

His Grace of Buckingham rents a house in Knight Ryder Street and plots to have Sir Farquhar, an actress, abducted and carried there. Buckingham asks Colonel Holles to abduct Syria and take her to this house for him. At first the colonel refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Perhaps not. But a man standing in the shadow of the gallows should not be over-cautious."

The flush perished in the Colonel's face; the haunting fear returned to his eyes. The Duke, seeing him thus suddenly stricken by that grim reminder, was moved to sudden laughter.

"It seems you have to realize, Colonel Holles, that there is no music without frets. You resent that I should ask a trifling service of you when in return I am offering to make your fortune. For that is what I am offering. You come as opportunity to my need as to your own. Serve me as I require, and I pledge my word that I shall not neglect you."

"But this . . . this . . ." faltered Holles, protesting. "It is a task for bullies, for jackals."

The Duke shrugged. "Damme! Why trouble to define it?" Then he changed his tone again. "The choice is yours. Fortune makes the offer: gold on the one hand; hemp on the other. I do not press either upon you."

Holles was torn between fear and honor.

"I'll go my ways, I think," he said heavily, and half turned as if to depart.

"You know whither it leads?" came the Duke's warning voice.

In silence Holles bowed, and made his way to the door with dragging feet, his last bubble pricked.

And then the Duke's voice arrested him again.

"Holles, you are a fool."

"I have long known it. I was a fool when I saved your life, and you pay me as a fool should be paid."

"You pay yourself. And of your own choice you do so in fool's coin."

Seeing him standing arrested there, still hesitating, the Duke approached him. His grace's need, as you know, was very urgent. It was no over-statement that Holles' coming had been opportune. Unless he could make Holles the tool that he required so sorely, where should he find another? He set a friendly hand upon the Colonel's shoulder.

And whilst the Duke now talked, persuasively, tempting him with a picture of what might otherwise happen on the other, the Colonel's own tormented mind was reconsidering.

Were his hands really so clean, his life so blameless, his honor so unmarred, that he must boggle at this vileness, and boggle at it to the extent of allowing them to stretch his neck and disembowel him sooner than perform it? And what was this vileness when all was said? A bag-ge of the theater, a trull of an actress, had played upon the Duke that she might make the greater profit out of him in the end. The Duke, wearied of her tricks and wiles, desired to cut the game short. Thus the Duke represented the situation. And what cause had Holles to assume that it was other than a true representation? The girl was an actress and therefore, the puritanical contempt of the playhouse and its denizens—heritage of his Commonwealth days—left him no doubt upon that score. If she were a lady of quality, a woman of virtue, the thing would be different. Then, indeed, to be a party to such an act were a wickedness unthinkable, a thing sooner than which he would, indeed, suffer death. But where was the vileness here, since the object itself was vile? Against what, then, really, did this young offend? Against himself; against his soldier's dignity. The act required of him was one proper to a hired bully. It was ignoble. But was hanging less ignoble? Was he to let them put a rope about his neck and the brand of the gallows on his name out of tenderness for a baggage of the theater who did not even know?

Buckingham was right. He was a fool. All his life he had been a self-scrupulous in trifles, negligent in the greater things. And now upon his most trifling scruple of all he would fitly sacrifice his life.

"Your grace," he said hotly, "I am your man."

CHAPTER XVI

The Sedan-Chair

His grace behaved generously, and at the same time with a prudence which reveals the alert and calculating mind of this gifted man, who might have been great had he been less of a voluntary.

He attended with Holles before the Justices early on the morrow, announcing himself able to confirm out of his own knowledge the truth of the account which the Colonel gave of his relations with the attained Tucker. More was not needed. The synophantic court bent the knee before this great gentleman who enjoyed the close friendship of the King.

This at the outset was Holles delivered from his wrist peril. Next was info med that, since service of any distinction in England was almost out of the question for his father's son, Buckingham would supply him with letters to several high-placed friends of his own in France, where a capable soldier well recommended need never lack employment.

From assistance before the Justices, Colonel Holles repaired straight to Finsbury-street to conclude arrangements with the owner of the house in Knight Ryders. Of this he now acquired the tenancy in his own name for the term of one year. The merchant did not trouble to conceal the fact that he regarded Colonel Holles as crazy to desire to take up his residence in an infected city from which all who were able were making haste to remove themselves. Had the Colonel needed a reminder of it, he had it in the fact that he was constrained to go on foot, not only because hackney-coaches were now rare, but because the use of them was considered highly imprudent, since so many had been used by infected persons. Doors smeared with the red cross and guarded by watchmen were becoming commonplaces, and the comparatively few people met in the streets who still sought to maintain the normal tenor and business of their lives mired with the listlessness of despondency or else with the watchfulness of hunted creatures. The pungent smell of electuaries, and particularly of camphor, was wafted to the Colonel's nostrils from the person of almost every human he met.

He may have thought again that—as he had already admirably expressed it—Buckingham was led by his passion like a blind man by his dog, to continue thrusting himself at such a time into the City, and he may have taken satisfaction in the thought that he, himself, so soon as this business should be accomplished, was to shake the poisonous dust of London from his feet.

Matters concluded with the merchant, the Colonel went to take possession of the house, and he installed there two of the four French lackeys the Duke had sent him for myrmidons.

After that there was little to do but wait until Saturday. That evening, however, and the next, the Colonel repaired to Lincoln's Inn to watch from a safe distance Miss Farquharson's departure from the theater, and so inform himself precisely of her habits in the matter. On both occasions she came forth at the same time—a few minutes after seven, and entered her waiting sedan-chair, in which she was borne away.

On Friday evening Holles went again, at six o'clock, and he had been waiting half an hour before the chair that was to convey her home made its appearance. It was the same chair as before and borne by the same men.

Holles longed forward to engage them in talk. Of set purpose and despite the warm weather, he had donned a well-worn leather jerkin to cover and conceal his fairly presentable coat.

He slouched toward the chairmen, pulling at a clay pipe, a man with one in his hands. And they, sitting on the shafts of the chair—one on each side, so as to balance each other—were nothing loath to have the dust of their waiting beguiled by the thrasional garrulousness his appearance led them to expect.

He did not disappoint them. He talked of the pestilence and of the war, and of the favoritism practiced at Court, which bestowed commands upon all manner of incompetent tops and kept hardened and stout old soldiers like himself cooling his heels in London's plague-hidden streets.

On the following evening—which was that of Saturday—you behold him there again, at about the same hour, joyously hailed by Miss Farquharson's chairmen in a manner impudently blending greeting with derision.

They took the Colonel between them, and with arms linked the three set a course for the little alehouse at the corner of Portugal Row. The Colonel was more garrulous than ever, and very confidential. He had met a friend, he insisted upon informing them—an old brother-in-arms who had come upon fortunate days, from whom he had succeeded in borrowing a good round sum.

Into the alehouse they rolled, to be skilfully piloted by the Colonel into a quiet corner well away from the windows and the light. He called tostily, tinsily, for the landlady, hanging the table with the hilt of his sword. And when she made her appearance, he silenced her protests by a order.

Three pints of Canary stiffly laced with brandy."

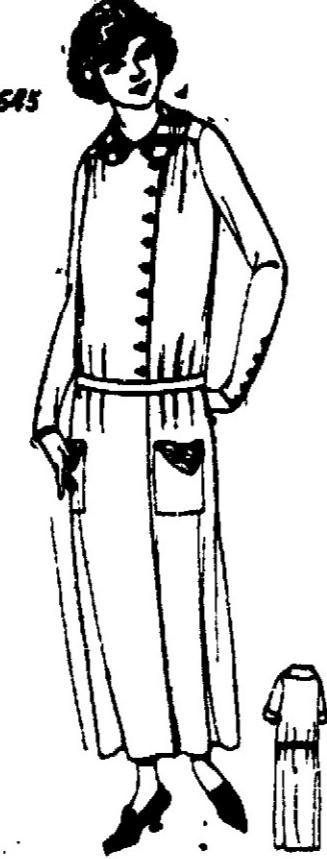

The wine was brought, and the facetious pair swilled it greedily, and they praised it, with rolling of eyes and resounding lip-smack-

ing. And when she made her appearance, he silenced her protests by a order.

An Intimate Story of Insecret Emotions Revealed in Private Letters

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRESCOTT

Your dear letter just received. Was there ever in this world as sweet a woman as yours, dear?

I cannot understand why you picked me out from the numberless men who must have laid their hearts at your feet. Every day I thank God many times that you did. I would be lost without you.

I have been a good deal of a roister, Leslie, but at that I think perhaps I will average up with other men. That makes me think of something Mrs. Atherton said yesterday that was rather funny.

I was remarking rather jokingly what an example I had been since you went away, and she said, "Don't go and get proud of yourself, Mr. Prescott. I never knew it to fall that when Sam began to swell with pride at his good conduct, he immediately began to pity himself, and as he called it 'spilled the beans'."

Your friend, Sally Atherton, is a queer combination and most interesting, Leslie. She is quick and clever and brilliant. Sometimes I think she is the most selfish woman in all the world, and then again she seems the most unselfish.

She hasn't much use for a man as an appendage, but I rather think she is the kind of a woman that likes to feel she has only to beckon and someone will come to her.

She does her work like a man, tirelessly and vigorously. Altogether she is a great acquisition to my working staff.

The other day we worked steadily from luncheon until half-past seven on that Wire Brush contract which, you know, has been worrying me. She looked quite as fatigued as I felt and I insisted she should go with me to dinner.

Altho she said she would rather rest than eat, I know she had had no luncheon for she was typing a part of the advertising copy when I left for mine, and it was finished and laid on my desk when I returned.

One of the things I like about her is that she made no excuse for not dining with me. She just said she was too tired to eat.

When I had convinced her that she need not be merely stopped to run a comb thru her bobbed hair, which you know is naturally curly, and powder her nose and we were on our way.

I was glad she went with me because from some little things she said I imagine she has been very lonely. I asked her if you had not been to see her, and she answered that you had called upon her twice, but she did not believe in mixing friendship with business.

I told her that was foolish, she answered enigmatically. "Perhaps."

There goes the telephone dear. I'll finish this letter when I come back.

HERE'S WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT TANLAC

"If it had not been for Tanlac I would still be a sick, discouraged woman, for nothing else seemed to do me any good," says Mrs. Edward Gibbs.

All the advertising in the world and all the sales efforts combined could not have made the great success for TANLAC that has been attained, unless this reconstructive tonic possessed merit of the greatest degree. Over 40 Million Bottles of Tanlac have been sold and the demand today is greater than ever before.

That TANLAC possesses merit and has brought relief to hundreds of thousands of persons is attested by the great number of testimonies that have been received by the company from people in every state of the Union and every province of Canada. There are over 100,000 such statements on file with the company, all ringing with sincere praise for TANLAC and what it has accomplished.

Here are excerpts from a few of the 100,000 statements on file:

Mrs. Edward Gibbs, Lancaster, Pa.—"For 2 years indigestion deprived me of nearly all the pleasure of living. If it had not been for TANLAC I would still be a sick and lifeless woman, for nothing else seemed to do me any good."
